Prescriptive Play Therapy for Treating Traumatized Children

Practitioners will leave this workshop with a tool box full of new techniques for helping children work through many forms of trauma (abuse, domestic violence, death and divorce). Child symptomatology related to trauma will be discussed. New play therapy interventions will be demonstrated and tied to specific treatment goals. Videotape segments, examples of children's art and sandtrays as well as case vignettes will augment the experiential, prop-based activities. Clinicians will be able to make immediate applications of these techniques to their work with clients.

Learning Objectives

Following the workshop, participants should be able to:

- Explain some of the ways that trauma affects children
- Develop treatment goals for children experiencing various symptoms as a response to trauma
- Match interventions to treatment goals and trauma type
- Apply many new play therapy techniques to the treatment of traumatized children

Saturday, March 6
Play Therapy for Strengthening Attachment: Blending Science and Technique

This workshop will combine cutting edge research on neuroscience and attachment literature with innovative techniques for strengthening the parent/child relationship. Treatment goals will be broken down into sequential steps with several fun, nurturing techniques illustrated for each step.

Learning Objectives

Following this workshop, participants should be able to:

- Articulate functional and dysfunctional patterns of attachment
- Describe how the attachment relationship impacts brain development
- Translate aspects of the client's neurological development into practical treatment goals
- List ten directive play therapy interventions that will assist clients in re-patterning their attachment scripts.

Prescriptive Play Therapy for Treating Trauma and Attachment Issues

Presented by Paris Goodyear-Brown

Paris Goodyear-Brown, LCSW, RPT-S is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker and a Registered Play Therapist-Supervisor with specialized training in work with children, adolescents and their families. She received her undergraduate degree from Duke University and her MSSW from the University of Tennessee. She pioneered the first play therapy program for the Therapeutic Preschool at Dede Wallace Center before joining Vanderbilt University Medical Center's Child and Adolescent Psychiatric Outpatient Clinic, serving both the outpatient setting and school based program. She is currently in child private practice and serves as adjunct faculty for graduate programs at the University of Tennessee, Vanderbilt University, and Trevecca Nazarene University. Paris has an international reputation as a dynamic and original speaker. She provides supervision, organization consultation and training on many topics related to child treatment. She is the author of Gebby the Gecko, a new bibliotherapy material aimed at helping children disclose and heal from traumatizing experiences. She has also authored a book entitled Digging for Buried Treasure : 52 Prop-Based Play Therapy Interventions for Treating the Problems of Childhood and co-authored an original DVD, 10 Peas in a Pod, a resource that helps clinicians immediately replicate empirically informed prescriptive play therapy strategies.
